'Live your day as if, it were the last day of your life.' No doubt, due to Covid 19 pandemic. We have been highly threatened. Our anxiety has risen up to sky. Imagining my first day after Covid-19 ends, is something similar to a movie (a fictional movie). Let me share you, what I've thought of doing, on the very first day after Covid-19 ends.

This pandemic has taught me alot of things. One of which is 'to be prepared for anything.' It has taught me how it feels to have money but not be able to buy things that we want i.e food, clothing and others. But thankfully, my parents had stocked food and terrace planting has always helped us. Therefore I would go buy some seedlings and plant them for future use. It would act as a pre caution measure.

I would then go to school, meet all my friends, talk to them endlessly. I would greet my teachers and thank them for their continuous help even during this pandemic. I have realized 'when things are no more with you, you realize its value/importance.' God would ~~has~~^{be} giving me second chance to value things in my life if this pandemic ends and we cope up with our new normal. I would therefore value all the bus rides to school and back home.

I would come back home from school and like any usual day before pandemic, I would tell mother about my day and eat her fingerlicking tasty snacks

I would then go for a walk around my area. The fresh air, the greenery all around, people being happy, would just be so much fascinating.

This pandemic has also taught me how it feels to be inside 4 walls for 6 months straight.

I miss my grandparents alot. They have been living on their own and are already 85 years old. My grandparents cannot walk much and therefore stay home all the time. Their only way of relieving their stress is by talking to their children and grand children virtually.

I therefore would give them a surprise visit that evening with their all time favourite food mo:mo and talk with them, serve them.

Writing about my first day after this pandemic ends got me into seventh heaven. I hope this ends soon and finally I am able to do all that wanted to.
